1. In [REDACTED] the 55th Separate Tank Training Battalion of the 13th Guards Mechanized Division, there was a library where all non-classified manuals were available to the battalion for the instruction of the cadre and the training companies. [REDACTED]

25X1

[REDACTED] The battalion cadre, however, had complete access to anything in the library. In addition to the official literature in the library, there were also about 3,000 books for leisure reading. Various publications of magazines and newspapers were subscribed to by the unit and were kept in the library.

25X1

2. In order to take out any item from the library, the individual was required to show his service book and identify himself as a member of the battalion. The librarian then either initiated a library card or entered the items being checked out on a card in the library file. Books could be taken out for as long as 10 days, [REDACTED]

25X1

3. The library was open daily except on Mondays from 1900 to 2130 hours. At times [REDACTED]

25X1

[REDACTED] the library was open during the day. 1 [REDACTED]
